Using the Colours

To ensure the clarity and dignity of our brand, UN Blue, white and black should be the most prominent colours used in materials throughout the UN system.

Our accent colours should be used sparingly across content and contexts such as publications. They are primarily used in instances when large amounts of information need to be differentiated by colour, such as in charts, graphs or maps.

Ensure suitable contrast

Do not place accent colours on other colours of similar brightness or darkness. Be sure that colour combinations allow for a discernible figure-ground relationship, and keep all content legible.

When using accent colours on web or screen platforms, make sure that any colour text, or text on a colour background, passes contrast standards per the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines.

Special Notice

Use SDG colours only within SDG contexts.

SDG colours are specific to the SDG brand. Our accent colour palette is separate from the SDG colour wheel.

While each SDG colour is tied closely to a specific issue, UN accent colours are ubiquitous and can be used for any subject matter. Unlike the SDG colours and their accompanying icons, our accent colours should not be tied to topical meaning.

Do not “colour-code” accent colours to represent specific ideas or entities within sub-brand systems or campaigns.
